The airport’s passenger traffic continued to be substantially affected by the COVID-19 pandemic crisis and its impact on air travel during February 2021, with a national lockdown still in place. As a result, the airport’s February 2021 passenger traffic was below the respective 2020 levels by 85.5% (and below the 2019 levels by 85.1%). Both domestic and international passenger traffic were sharply reduced, by 76% and 89.8%, respectively compared to 2020 and by 77% and 89.1%, respectively compared to 2019.

Overall, during the period January through February 2021, the airport’s passenger traffic totalled approximately 431 thousands, a decline of 84.8% compared to 2020 and 84.1% compared to 2019, as a result of the sharp traffic drop suffered due to the impact of the pandemic, since March 2020. Analytically, the volumes of domestic and international passengers decreased by 75.2% and 88.9%, respectively, compared to 2020 and by 76.2% and 88%, compared to the same period 2019.
